2. Translate The following passage into Bengali : 15

People in The Middle Ages believed that the world must cease to exist in 1000 A.D. The Christian community lived in this belief, and anyone doubting its authority was looked upon as a heretic. Most of the laws and exhortations of the mediaeval times began with the words, "at the forthcoming end of the world." As the tenth century was drawing to its close, the people became more and more apprehensive. Europe appeared at the time to have finished executing her last will and testament. Men wanted to atone for their sins. They gave away their belongings to the Church; in fact, these could no longer be said to be of any use to them. It was for the same reason that a large portion of the state property went over to the clergy. The thousandth year, however, passed by; but this earth of ours did not stop revolving in its orbit. Since then, few people have had the boldness to make prophecies about the end of the world.
